

1 A BRIEF REPORT

On Wednesday, 17th November, 2011 we went to the theatre in Colognola, Bergamo and we watched a play called "I Love London".

The main characters in the show were Charlie and Tony, an English and an Italian boy.

Then there were other characters.

The hostess with her peculiar pronunciation of the sound 'h'; Mrs Brown, the owner of a B & B, but also a dancer (!); Tony's mother, or, better, her voice; Sherlock Holmes, the famous detective; Mary Poppins, the nanny with a touch of magic; Her Highness (!) Queen Victoria; King Henry VIII and two of his six wives: the second (Anne Boleyn) and the fifth (Catherine Howard). Have we forgotten anybody? In case, tell us about it.

In the play there was much music and dancing.

Between the first and the second act there was a break so that we could eat a snack and drink something.

We were waiting for a debate with the actors at the end of the play, but we hadn't much time left. We thought to skip the debate to arrive at school on time.
